Public Policy and Management
Joint Stern-Wagner Undergraduate Minor

In today's global society, boundaries between governments, for-profits, and non-profits have become increasingly blurred. This has amplified the need for individuals who have a deep understanding of both public and private spheres and can confidently transition between the two. This interdisciplinary minor enables students to:

- examine the intricacies, convergences, variances, and challenges in sector-specific management practices;
- study the influences of politics and policy on local, domestic and international levels;
- explore sustainability issues within the sectors;
- understand the nuances of effective leadership.
