

Climate Finance
Initiative

New York University and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York are jointly organizing the inaugural Summer Climate Finance conference, to be held on May 31, 2024, at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in New York City. The conference will be an in-person event, featuring keynote speeches by Stefano Giglio and Harrison Hong as well as paper presentations. The organizers welcome theoretical and empirical papers or extended abstracts of early stage work that speak to key issues in climate finance, including but not limited to:

- The impact of natural disasters or disaster mitigation attempts on economic output, financial stability, credit access, etc.
- The impact of climate migration on economic output, household welfare, and consumption
- The effects of green pledges on bank lending and aggregate economic output
- The inflationary or macroeconomic effects of different carbon emission-mitigation techniques
- The impact of biodiversity collapse on welfare and economic output
- The pricing of climate risks across different asset classes
- The importance of insurance markets in hedging climate related risks

Submission Procedures

The deadline for submissions is February 28, 2024. Please submit papers or extended abstracts to nyu.nyfed.climate@gmail.com with the subject line "Submission 2024." Authors of accepted papers will be notified by March 31, 2024.

Travel funding is available for PhD students who are selected to present. Please indicate in your submission whether the presenter is a PhD student.

We look forward to seeing many of you this summer.

Johannes Stroebel and Kristian Blickle