Andrew Hollenhorst, US Chief Economist, leads Citi Research's US Economics Team and is responsible for Citi's views on the US economy and monetary policy. The team endeavors to tie its views on economic fundamentals to outcomes in financial markets. Prior to his current role, he initiated Citi's coverage of short-term interest rate markets and worked on cross-asset investment strategies.

Prior to his current role at Citi, Andrew initiated Citi's coverage of US short-term interest rates and was ranked 3rd in the Institutional Investor (II) survey.

Andrew holds a PhD in economics from UCLA and a BA in math and economics from UC Berkeley.