CGEB-CREFR Conference on China's Real Estate Markets

NYU Stern School of Business

April 17, 2015

Jennifer N. Carpenter and Stijn Van Nieuwerburgh, Organizers

Call for Papers – Deadline December 1, 2014

Chinese property is the most important sector in the global economy. It has been pivotal in the country's economic development, provided lucrative business for industrial commodity producers from Perth to Peru, and been the backbone of the surge in world exports to China. In the past few years, predictions that the sector was about to implode at any moment have not been borne out. But property activity indicators have been trending lower since mid-2013, and the downturn in the sector now threatens to turn into a bust.

This conference aims to bring together the world's leading experts on China's real estate markets for an in-depth discussion of the origins of the property boom and a study of its consequences for the Chinese macro-economy, financial institutions and markets, government, and for the rest of the world. We welcome academic paper submissions on this topic. The academic program will be followed by a lunchtime keynote speech and panel discussions featuring leading policy makers, academics, and real estate industry captains.

Please submit completed papers to jcarpen0@stern.nyu.edu by December 1, 2014.
