Teaching Outside Your Department and Overload Teaching - updated policy

Sometimes you may be asked to teach a course in another department, either as part of your regular teaching load or as an overload. As long as it does not cause any problem for your home department, such extra-departmental teaching is fine. However, it must be approved by your department chair prior to the semester in which the teaching occurs. If that is not the case, then you may not get appropriate credit for teaching it.

Please also be aware that all overload teaching needs approval from the Office of Faculty Affairs in advance of the term in which it occurs. If such approval is not obtained ahead of time, then the course may be counted toward your teaching load for the following year, and not as an overload.

The overload policy and form are available at: <https://www.stern.nyu.edu/portal-partners/faculty-guide/appointment-performance-compensation>

Meet Your Colleague

Ilan Guttman, Associate Professor of Accounting

“Everything I do is for fun, including my job.”

Ilan joined Stern last September as an Associate Professor, moving his family of five from Stanford. He lives in Bergen County, New Jersey, where he takes advantage of the suburban environment by mountain biking several times a week with his sons after work. Now that it’s getting darker, he may be playing more basketball instead. Ilan moved to the US from Israel in 2004, and has found he really likes the east coast. He enjoys balancing the stimulation of New York City with the peace and quiet of Tenafly.

Ilan’s research is mainly about disclosure, both voluntary and mandatory. He looks at firms’ incentive to disclose, and how markets react. His work has been mostly theoretical, but is lately looking at data to complement and test his theories.

Preventing Campus Violence - Additional Training Sessions

In case you missed the October 28 session, Dean Henry has asked that you attend another. This important course, created by NYU faculty and administrators, provides you and other members of our community with information that may help you identify warning signs of violence and know actions to take that may help prevent acts of violence. The program also outlines what to do in the unlikely event an attack takes place. Please visit NYUiLearn using the directions below to enroll in one of these sessions. Space is limited.

Wednesday, November 5 (2:30- 4:00 pm)

Wednesday, November 19 (9:30- 11:00 am)

Tuesday, December 9 (9:30- 11:00 am)

1. Sign in to home.nyu.edu/work using your NYU NET ID and password
2. Locate the NYUiLearn Login button and click to view the welcome page
3. Search for Preventing Campus Violence course by typing course code HAS 001
4. Click Enroll to view details for dates

Dance Lesson - November 10

Before you know it, the Stern Holiday Party will be here! Susanna Stein is ready to teach you some line dances so we can all strut our stuff on the dance floor. Susanna, Director of Faculty Affairs, is also a country-western dance teacher and competitor. Even if you think you have two left feet, don’t worry, she’ll help you find your right one! Come on out on Monday, November 10, from 2-3 in Abbe-Bogen. Make sure to wear smooth-soled shoes to make dancing on carpet easier.

Funding Opportunity

The National Science Foundation Partnerships for Innovation (PFI) program within the Division of Industrial Innovation and Partnerships (IIP) is an umbrella for two complementary subprograms, Accelerating Innovation Research (AIR) and Building Innovation Capacity (BIC). Both programs are concerned with the movement of academic research discoveries into the marketplace, although each focuses on different stages along the innovation spectrum.

With a budget of up to $800,000 for up to three years per award, the goal is that these synergistic partnerships and collaborations between government, academia, and other public and private entities will result in new wealth and the building of strong local and regional economies.

The deadline for the Letter of Intent (required) is January 12, 2015 and the deadline for the Full Proposal is February 18, 2015. For more information, please visit the following link:
